

Phil Moses

Phil Moses is now in his 10th year as Director of the Academic Support Program at NC State. Moses boasts a broad professional background in education. From 1980-81, he served as a tutor and advisor to the children of New York Governor Hugh Carey. He then spent two years at a private high school in Puerto Rico, serving as the school's principal the second year. Moses returned to the mainland United States in 1984 and headed west to become a reading specialist for two public school systems in Arizona. He moved into college athletics five years later as an academic advisor and tutorial coordinator at Arizona State. After two years in Tempe, Moses moved to Texas A&M, where he served as a scholastic supervisor and tutorial coordinator for five years before coming to NC State. A native of Corinth, N.Y., Moses played basketball while earning his A.A. degree from Paul Smith's (NY) College. He went on to earn his bachelor's in physical education at the State University of New York (SUNY) at Cortland, and finished his education with a master's degree in reading at SUNY-Albany. Moses also is a past president of the National Association of Academic Advisors for Athletics. He is married to the former Barb Bowler, and they have two children, Darren (17) and Tess (11).
